final portion of the symphony rises through a series of soaring climaxes to an ecstatic conclusion. What to Listen For Mahler begins the symphony with a thrilling call scored for eight horns. This stirring idea quickly gives way, however, to funereal sounds, affirming the composerâ€™s idea that nature encompasses tragedy as well as delight.

NATURE RESOUNDING Mahler found the inspiration for his

In most symphony orchestras, there are about 30 violinists which represents about 3 times more than any of the other string sections of the orchestra. This number creates a solid sonority and an artistic balance between sounds coming from the different families of instruments within the symphony orchestra.
